

SCHOOL OF SACRAMENTO BALLET ROSEVILLE CAMPUS

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Sacramento, CA [April 3, 2026] — School of Sacramento Ballet is honored to announce the opening of its Roseville Campus, building on the longstanding legacy of Northern California Dance Conservatory (NCDC), whose owner, Jen Bradford, will be retiring after years of dedicated leadership and service to the community.

For decades, NCDC has been a beloved home for dance education in the Roseville area, known for its commitment to nurturing young dancers and fostering a love of dance and artistic excellence. As Jen Bradford steps into this well-earned next chapter, Sacramento Ballet is proud to carry forward that legacy, ensuring that students and families continue to have access to high-quality dance training in a supportive and inspiring environment.

“Building NCDC has been one of the most meaningful chapters of my life, shaped by the dancers, families, faculty, and community who made it so special. With deep gratitude and a full heart, I am excited to see Sacramento Ballet carry this legacy forward, creating new opportunities for future generations of dancers and for our community as a whole,” Jen Bradford said, reflecting on her 20 years leading NCDC. “This transition is both a celebration and a continuation,” said Executive Director Kiera Anderson. “We are deeply grateful to Jen for the incredible foundation she has built. It is an honor to carry that work forward and to welcome NCDC families into the Sacramento Ballet community.”

The School of Sacramento Ballet – Roseville Campus will offer expanded programming and new opportunities for dancers, while maintaining the sense of community and training that has defined NCDC. Classes will continue to be held at the newly named Opal Studios, with students also having access to our Sacramento campus. Families can expect continuity in their experience, alongside thoughtful enhancements that reflect Sacramento Ballet’s commitment to excellence, accessibility, and creativity. The new campus represents a meaningful step forward in Sacramento Ballet’s vision to broaden access to dance education throughout the region.

More information about programming, timelines, and enrollment will be shared in the coming weeks. For updates, please visit www.sacballet.org or follow Sacramento Ballet on social media.

About Sacramento Ballet

For more than 70 years, Sacramento Ballet has been a cultural cornerstone of the region, presenting world-class performances, providing high-quality dance education, and offering meaningful community engagement programs. Through its performances and educational initiatives, Sacramento Ballet enriches the human experience through dance and ensures it is accessible to all.

Media Contact:

Dr. Kiera Anderson
Executive Director, Sacramento Ballet
(917)691-9386 | ed@sacballet.org